

Universite Catholique de Lille

Université Catholique de Lille

Founded in 1875, the Université Catholique de Lille is a multidisciplinary institution unique in France. From its very beginnings, what is now France's largest private, not-for-profit university, with an enrollment of 33,000 students, and 217 degree programs in six areas of study, has distinguished itself within the fields of higher education, research, and health, through its commitment to mutual care as a central value. The institution both supports and is supported by the local region and community, and is open to diversity, and to the world.

It consists of 5 Faculties, 20 Grandes Ecoles (graduate schools in engineering and business), schools, and institutes, and a hospital group. The excellence of the university's reputation can be traced to its active and innovative teaching methods. Many courses are taught in a small-group format and ensure close attention to students progress.
